

The invention relates to a system for changing the communication means used for communication between two software agents. Each software agent includes:

- a communication module giving access to said communication means; and
- means for receiving a new communication module from said communication server.

10